

The Department of Digital, Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) issued a call for evidence about digital identity in mid-2019, with a submission date in mid-September. This document is PIB-d's contribution, and argues - among many other points - that the real problem is not 'digital identity' specifically, but 'user control of trustworthy personal data' generally. As of April 2020, DCMS has still not produced the expected report from the consultation exercise.
